NEARLY 9,000 new money order offices will be the result of the recent order which changes the rule governing the creation of such offices. Prior to April last a Postoffice must have a revenue of at least $250 before it would have the right to issue money orders. Then it was the rule that offices be given this privilege when application was made by the Postmaster or citizens. But now any office having receipts of not less than $200 is made a money order office without preliminaries. The extension of this system to small towns is believed to be a great public convenience. At the close of the last fiscal year there were some 10,000 money order offices in existence.

CRISIS PAST.

As Friends Will the Troops Be Received.

White Wings of Peace Hovering Over the City of Homestead.

The Boys to Blue Will Be Jollied Out of Sight—Special Police of 100 Selected From Mill-Workers to Protect the Soldiers From Insult.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., July 12.—The militia is to be received with open arms by the mill-workers, and a special police, 100 strong, has been selected from the ranks of the strikers themselves to see that no indignity is offered the uniformed troops of the state by any of the injudicious or hot-headed workmen. The efficacy of this policy was demonstrated within a half hour after the adjournment of the mass meeting Monday afternoon, by the prompt arrest and escort to the lock-up of an intemperate striker who questioned the wisdom of receiving the militia as friends and brothers and killing the fatted calf in their honor.

The power of organization was never better exemplified than in the graceful unanimity with which the iron workers Monday afternoon accepted the suggestions of their leaders, and decided that the troops should be received as friends and not as foes, and that, in contrast with the reception to the hated Pinkertons, the militia should be welcomed by the triumphant blast of trumpets and the music of the bands. To all but the pessimist the conclusion is irresistible that the crisis is passed, and that Homestead will know hostilities no more so long as the military of the state is on the ground, and there is no attempt to smuggle the Pinkertons into the works. Most people have concluded that the Pinkertons have satisfied their warlike spirit and are not likely to provoke further bloodshed by attempting to occupy the works. Indeed, the strikers regard the advent of the troops as the surest indication that the private militia of capital will invade Homestead no more, and much of the success of Monday's meeting was due to the belief that the state militia was ordered to Homestead as much to prevent the bloodshed that another visit of the Pinkertons would provoke, as to quiet the present disorder in the iron region.

The mass-meeting Monday afternoon was a most significant one, and its developments were awaited with intense interest by the citizens on the outside. The meeting was attended by about 5,000 people, and in this number was about every one of the number who shouldered a musket and fought the Pinkertons in the bloody battle of last week.

Burgess McLuckie presided and although Burgess of Homestead, he is one of the most prominent leaders of the strikers, and shares with Hugh O'Donnell a great influence over these sturdy workmen. On taking the chair the burgess said: "The object of this meeting is to take suitable action for a reception to our friends, the military, who will arrive here in a day or two. The general impression is abroad that the military people are a dangerous people. This is a mistake, and is dangerous to the dignity and honor that they so nobly and faithfully represent. Should not be insulted, we have come here to take whatever action we may deem feasible to prevent that calamity. We want to arrange for a reception—one of the kind that the military has never thought of. [Laughter.]

"We want our people to stand in fact, every man, woman and child in this town—to welcome the military with open arms, because, just as true as we stand here, I pledge you my judgment that this is one of the best steps that could possibly have been taken for our people—this calling out of the military. I want to say to you that I think this man, Gov. Pattison, is acting wisely and judiciously. He understands our cause and he understands our position; so does the entire civilized world. He is a just man and will not cater to monopoly, and a man who will not permit the troops of this state to be the servants of the people, the defenders of the dignity of the Commonwealth, which is ours, and as near and dear to us as any human being that God ever let breathe—I say Robert E. Pattison will never permit an outrage to be perpetrated upon a people such as the people of Homestead and this surrounding community. [Great applause.] It is also an evident fact that that unwashed horde of Pinkerton people are again mobilizing their forces; that is evident to our governor. He does not want any bloodshed here, and he knows by your action of the past that that unwashed horde strikes our shores there must be blood shed. [Applause.]

"I do not want the mobilized representative that may put in an appearance here to be insulted by even a hoot or a howl or the least indication of disrespect. For one, stand here and say that if any man is indelicate enough to do an act on that kind in this emergency he should be taken to the river and ducked, and I will be one to help do it. [Good! Good! and applause.] You are not going to interfere with our best interests, so our ducking committee will accurately be necessary to be appointed at this meeting. [Laughter.]

A brave mill-worker jumped to his feet, and with great seriousness moved that any man who should be foolish enough to offer any insult to the troops when they come be immediately thereafter taken to the river and ducked. The motion prevailed by acclamation, and the 100 special policemen were subsequently instructed to carry it out to the letter. It was also ordered that a committee should be appointed to inform all mill-workers not present that such action had been taken.

"Now, gentlemen," resumed the burgess, "our plan is to get out every band in Homestead." [Great applause.]

A man, representing the musicians, shouted: "I am authorized to say that the bands have already volunteered their services," and again there was great enthusiasm.

The president of each lodge was instructed to make proper preparations for the ceremonies, and the burgess announced that he would ascertain exactly when the military was expected, and give notice of its approach by town criers.

THE Steel Company to Prosecute. PITTSBURGH, July 12.—It is announced on what is considered to be good authority, that the Carnegie Steel Co. is about to begin prosecution against the leaders of the Homestead riot for conspiracy and murder. The company is said to have retained several of the best criminal lawyers of Western Pennsylvania, and instructed them to institute proceedings at once.
